1928 Henry Sherwood, Big Man On Campus and Charleston Champ, graduates from college. His Dad gives Henry a new car for being tops in his class. Henry insures it with State Farm Mutual, tops in its class.

1937 Lois insists the Sherwoods' new home be ivy-covered. Henry insists it be covered by insurance. Henry gets a low-cost policy from State Farm Fire and Casualty. Lois gets poison ivy.

1932 Henry proposes to former Snow Ball Queen Lois Claypool. Her father says OK, if Henry has a life insurance policy big enough to take care of her. (Even in '32, State Farm Life had a low-cost policy to fit almost anybody.)

1940 Henry and Lois, after 3 daughters in a row, call their first son Hank, and their State Farm agent immediately. (For more low-cost State Farm Life insurance.)

1965 Hank Sherwood finishes school, marries Sally Gregg (former Snow Ball Queen), buys a new car and a new house all in one week. He uses State Farm's convenient Monthly Pay Plan to pay for all his insurance (auto, home, life) in one monthly check.

1968 Henry turns his business over to Hank and retires with Lois to a quiet home on a quiet lake. His State Farm life policies are paying off every month and his State Farm Boatowners Policy will bail him out if he runs into trouble with his boat.

All kinds of people come to State Farm for insurance.

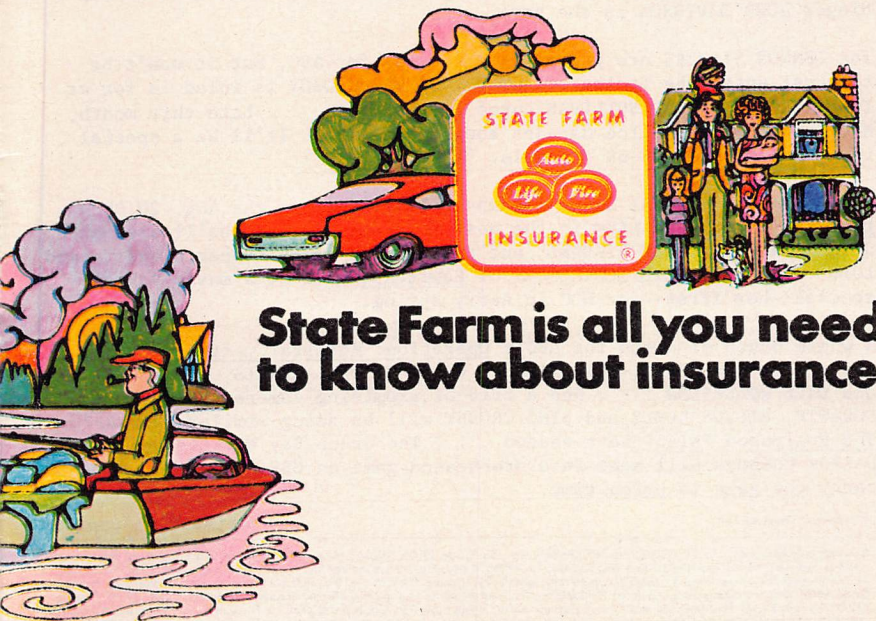

All kinds of insurance. For their lives, their families, their homes and their cars.

We stay biggest in car and home insurance, and keep growing fastest of all the major life insurers, by giving all of those people what they want.

Complete insurance protection. Fast, friendly service. And our well-known rock-bottom rates.

Your own State Farm agent can do the same for you.

He lives in your neighborhood and he's listed in the Yellow Pages.

State Farm is all you need to know about insurance.

State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company • State Farm Fire and Casualty Company • State Farm Life Insurance Company (In New York and Wisconsin, non-participating life insurance is available from State Farm Life and Accident Assurance Company). Home Offices: Bloomington, Illinois

The first CBS Playhouse production for the '68-69 season will be J.P. MILLER's "The People Next Door," a contemporary script about problems affecting two seemingly worry-free families in suburbia. It goes on Oct. 15 (9:30-11 P.M., ET) . . . Starting Sept. 1 and running through Nov. 3, ABC News' Issues and Answers: Race to the White House Sunday interview show will expand to an hour (1-2 P.M.) to cover the election year's campaign phase.

Comedian JERRY LESTER (you remember him from the early ages of television) will make a guest appearance on Gentle Ben in '68-69 . . . JULES POWER's "A Sense of Wonder" special for ABC will feature BILL WOODIN, the man who directs the Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum in Tucson . . . The producers of ABC's fall starter, That's Life (ROBERT MORSE's new vehicle), are rushing around signing up people like SHELLEY BERMAN, MAUREEN ARTHUR, KAY MEDFORD, JACKIE VERNON and the TURTLES for guest appearances.

JACK PAAR, along with wife MIRIAM and daughter RANDY, go to Africa at the end of this month to shoot film for an ABC special . . . Scouts are out in 32 American cities to find candidates for the 2nd annual Model of the Year Pageant, a 90-minute CBS special which goes on Sept. 14. Singer JOHN DAVIDSON is the host.

The LENNON SISTERS are preparing a special for ABC, but it won't be telecast until the spring of '69 . . . NORM CROSBY is inked in for at least three more ED SULLIVAN turns in the fall . . . Late this month, NBC is shooting the Ice Capades show in Atlanta. It'll be a special in the network's '68-69 schedule.

The Rumanian National Dance Company will perform on the Aug. 20 Showtime on CBS; STEVE ALLEN is the host for that one, and he'll also have JAYNE MEADOWS, CLIFF RICHARD, and the English teeny-bopper singer named LULU . . . ELIZABETH MONTGOMERY of Bewitched will do a music-variety special--her first--for NBC in early spring.

A whole bunch of hosts for ABC's Operation: Entertainment are signed and ready: BOB CRANE, FLIP WILSON, ED AMES, PHIL HARRIS, JIMMY DEAN and DALE ROBERTSON . . . And a trio of promising comers named JIMMY DURANTE, MILTON BERLE and BING CROSBY will be doing similar chores for The Hollywood Palace next season . . . The Green Bay Packers and the Dallas Cowboys will meet in a pre-season game on CBS Aug. 24. CBS will carry the game in prime time.

as we see it

■ "Trying to be objective, to keep the 'balance' all the time, can be a tiresome and frustrating business. The journalists who work in television are not political eunuchs. They see and hear things which inflame them. They have strong views like other people. The outstanding ones among them have a highly developed concept of public duty. . . . There are times when they feel they ought to say something. Must they always remain neutral? Are their opinions not worth hearing?"

We reprint the above from the Times of London as evidence of the kind of criticism that arises when television broadcasters are required by regulation—as they are in the United Kingdom—to be absolutely impartial in matters of political and industrial controversy.

■ American broadcasters are not restricted in this manner. They are free to express opinions on all subjects. The only requirement is that when they do express an opinion they must afford time for those who hold opposing views to be heard too.

As differentiated from opinion, most of our news programs try to report the news as objectively as is possible. Still, no matter how diligently news writers and announcers strive to be fair and objective, there are those in the audience who feel that their side is being slighted, that the news is being angled against them.

■ In this political year it is especially important that broadcasters avoid any indication of bias in news reports. And in the case of newscasters whose political leanings are well known, it is especially important that they clearly label editorial opinion as such.

Television is the chief source of news information for a majority of Americans. It is therefore all the more vital that its credibility as an objective news source be maintained.

How television will permit 200,000,000
Americans and other millions in Europe and the Orient to watch Republicans and Democrats choose

THE MEN WHO...

By Neil Hickey

Twenty years have passed since television aimed its first tentative camera at a national political convention, and now it's that time again—time for all the hoopla, for viewing with alarm and pointing with pride, for recriminations, backstage maneuverings and occasional walkouts. There's nothing quite so American as an American political convention.

Between the years 1948-1968 a not-so-subtle alteration has taken place in the nature of the conventions. What were once relatively private exercises in intramural politics are now monster pageants choreographed for the benefit of the whole Nation. Starting next Monday we'll be able to observe another one as the Republican Party convenes in Miami Beach, Fla.; and again on Aug. 26, when the Democrats get together in Chicago.

As usual, television will be on hand to report (in color this time) the events which will have their culmination in the November election. More than 2000 cameramen, reporters, directors, producers, stenographers and high-echelon brass employed by the three major networks will be in Miami Beach and Chicago, all at a combined cost of more than $22,000,000 plus the customary loss of revenue from all those regular prime-time shows which will be pre-empted.

This year, CBS and NBC will deliver their usual pre-gavel to post-gavel coverage for the expected four days of each conclave, and ABC plans to do a nightly 90-minute "instant special" which will include pre-taped highlights, discussion and analysis of the day's convention business. Walter Cronkite (CBS) and Chet Huntley and David Brinkley (NBC) will occupy their networks' anchor booths high over the convention floors; and ABC's Howard K. Smith will moderate his network's wrap-up just off the floor.

Miami Beach will be having its first political convention ever, and for the occasion they've built a spanking new 18,000-seat auditorium with plenty of room for television's demands. Because only two weeks (and 1380 miles) separate the Republican and Democratic meetings, the networks this year are installing much of their electronic equipment in mobile vans; after the Miami Beach meeting, the vans simply will be unplugged, driven straight through to Chicago, and plugged in again to the 13,500-seat, 35-year-old Amphitheater on the city's South Side, then tested and readied before the Democrats converge.

This road-show operation is costing the networks $3.5 million they'd rather not spend; but they were unsuccessful in persuading the Democrats to follow the Republicans into Miami Beach and thus avoid the need for two distinct television installations. Chicago, as a party official points out, is one of the few major U.S. cities with both a Democratic mayor (Richard Daley) and Democratic governor (Otto Kerner) whose influence could be important in the event of protest demonstrations by outsiders aimed at disrupting the convention. "It's best to be among friends," says one Democrat.

Both parties, obviously, are eager to have as roseate a light as possible cast upon their deliberations, especially since the proceedings are under the eyes not only of Americans, but of Europeans, Australians and Japanese, all of whom plan pickups, both live and on tape, via satellite relay (Early Bird over the Atlantic; Lani Bird over the Pacific). "They've gone after this story big," says CBS's convention producer, Robert Wussler.

So eager, in fact, are the Republicans to be seen at their handsomest by the cameras, that they've hired a firm of TV consultants called TNT Communications, Inc., to drill them in how to act at the podium, what to wear, and how to read a prompter. Nathan L. Halpern, president of TNT, explained to TV GUIDE: "We are responsible for the 'presentation'—that is, how the convention appears on color TV. We advise on the rostrum design, the selection of colors, lighting, background, makeup, prompting and so forth. In short, all the sophisticated means which are available for producing a program like this one.

"We'll have 30 to 40 people in Miami to work with the speakers. We'll be set up in the Fontainebleau Hotel and will invite all the speakers in for an orientation course. We don't leave these things to chance."

For months, Halpern and his agents have been studying photographs of the convention's leading personae so that when each arrives at the podium, he'll be bathed in the most flattering cosmetic lighting possible. "We modulate the lighting for portraiture," says Halpern, so that even if a speaker is jowly, bald or cadaverous, he'll still come out looking—if not as dashing as Gov. Ronald Reagan—at least a lot better than he normally does.

Lighting is also one of the headaches of James Kitchell of NBC, who is in charge of the five pool cameras in Miami Beach (CBS is pool producer for Chicago) which are aimed at the rostrum and its environs to provide each network with the running, basic story of who is saying what. Color-TV cameras are not only bulkier and more delicate than black-and-white ones, they need 100 percent more light (a minimum of 250 foot-candles on the delegates; 300 foot-candles on the rostrum). That means that the air conditioners must work harder and speakers must remember not to squint.

Kitchell will be the man who—seated in a mobile van near the hall—selects the best picture at any moment (from the pool cameras) to be sent along to the networks. They, in turn, can use either it or their own picture if they happen to have a better story or are venturing some analysis. Kitchell will be in constant touch with

Sen. George Murphy, the convention's program director, to know which event is coming up next.

As usual, the networks will have their bird dogs on the convention floor: NBC will go with its well-seasoned team—Frank McGee, John Chancellor, Sander Vanocur, Edwin Newman—and CBS will have a rotating group operating on and near the floor: Bill Stout, Joe Benti, Mike Wallace, John Hart, Hughes Rudd, David Schoumacher and Ike Pappas. ABC is depending on John Scali and Bob Clark.

CBS has assigned Harry Reasoner to lurk about the podium and see what he can pick up; Eric Sevareid and Roger Mudd will occupy a so-called "sub-anchor" position to deliver whatever punditry seems appropriate. Also, CBS has enlisted author Theodore H. White and humorist Art Buchwald for commentary.

ABC has on its team conservative journalist William F. Buckley and liberal novelist/playwright Gore Vidal, who—the network hopes—will add a dash of spice to its coverage. "We want these guys to be irreverent," says ABC's convention boss, Wally Pfister. "They don't have to be objective. We're expecting humor, too."

NBC disdains to hire outside talent to augment its convention team. "Who knows the story better than we do?" asks George Murray, the network's convention producer. The Today show, by the way, will move bag and baggage to Miami Beach and Chicago during the two meets; the staff will work through the night, says producer Al Morgan, so that early risers can find out what happened, if anything, after they fell asleep.

CBS and NBC will square off this year for a classical gavel-to-gavel shoot out, in spite of CBS News boss Richard S. Salant's well-known conviction that such redundant efforts only deprive large segments of the viewing public of any choice. "The only way they can vote 'nyet' is → by turning off their sets," Salant says.

It is NBC's celebrated devotion to saturation coverage which keeps CBS running doggedly alongside. The network is determined to outperform its competitor in an arena where Huntley-Brinkley traditionally have won higher ratings than Walter Cronkite.

"CBS News obviously is a much better prepared news organization than it was four years ago," says Bill Leonard, vice president of CBS News. "Four years ago, many thought that NBC was stronger than we, but right now I think there's little to choose between us." Leonard's argument derives substance from the fact that, since 1964, the Walter Cronkite evening news program has overtaken in the ratings, and in some areas passed, that of Huntley-Brinkley.

ABC, on the other hand—for reasons more fiscal than philosophic—has shucked off the gavel-to-gavel habit and hopes that its 90-minute nightly special (9:30-11 P.M., ET) will cover all the necessary ground without exasperating those among us with less tolerance for politicking.

First off in ABC's format will come a half-hour "instant documentary" handled by Howard K. Smith, built around one particular theme of importance on that day. That'll be followed by a 20-minute round-table, moderated by Bill Lawrence, giving the several correspondents a chance to tell what they've found out. Then there'll be a 5-6 minute "Insiders Report" narrated by Frank Reynolds, on some sidebar aspect of the convention; the Buckley-Vidal discussion will follow, for 15-20 minutes; and the rest of the time will be called "Update," a catalog of late-breaking developments, including a feature with Lawrence during which he'll try to predict the next day's developments.

"We'll break into this format live, of course, for any news stories of momentous importance," says Pfister. "Otherwise, we'll try to get off the air by 11 P.M., except on the night of the balloting, when we'll stay with the story." ABC's experiment is, in fact, being watched by partisans of selective coverage to see just how it works.

National political conventions are rapidly being calcified (thanks partly to TV) into ritual four-day affairs with fewer and fewer surprises. In 1924, the Democrats nominated John W. Davis after 103 ballots in a 16-day convention. Since then, the largest number of ballots has been six in 1940, when the GOP named Willkie.

Thus, we may reasonably expect (with the calm confidence of a Christian with four aces, as Mark Twain put it) that Monday night's session (starting about 7:30, ET) will consist of pro forma welcomes to Miami Beach by local dignitaries and a keynote address by Gov. Daniel Evans of Washington.

Tuesday will see the adoption of a platform, and the start of nominating and seconding speeches for favorite sons and serious candidates. Those loud portents along with their "spontaneous" demonstrations will end Wednesday night, and the balloting will commence that same evening, terminating, they hope, in agreement on a nominee.

Thursday night will see the selection of a Vice President and acceptance speeches by the two new standard-bearers. And that's the end, for another four years, of the rites which former President Eisenhower has called "a picture of confusion, of noise, of impossible department."

He was surely right about that, but the late Will Rogers was an inch closer to the truth when he said of a political convention: "It's the Fourth of July celebration of national politics. It's a clambake of big politicians. . . . But as bad as we are, and as funny as we do things, we are better off than the other countries, so bring on more conventions."

THEY'RE ALWAYS EXPECTED TO HAVE SOMETHING TO SAY

The networks' anchor men tell how they cover political conventions, from preparation to final gavel

Television's anchor men will be observing the Republican (in Miami Beach) and Democratic (in Chicago) efforts to produce nominees for the Presidency of the United States; their responsibilities are among the most demanding any newsman can face. TV GUIDE, in separate chats, recently asked Walter Cronkite of CBS, David Brinkley, Chet Huntley of NBC and Howard K. Smith of ABC (the four gentlemen on our cover this week) about some of the subtleties of covering political conventions, and here is what they said:

CRONKITE: Ever since 1952 I've been in the habit of preparing myself for conventions by compiling notes and clippings, and then transcribing and indexing them in a pair of loose-leaf folders. This really amounts to a memory exercise, since I plant all these facts in my mind by the act of writing them out. On the air, I seldom have to refer to the books. It's hard to read notes, at least in a one-man anchor job. There's no time.

BRINKLEY: I start a book for myself about a year ahead of time—things I encounter, any little idea which might be useful. I put them in a notebook divided up by states. I program myself like a computer. There's no time on the air to ask anybody anything or look anything up. So you must have it all ready before you start, and this needs meticulous preparation.

SMITH: It's hard to think about the conventions until after the last primary, but I have good clipping services, and I also go out and see the major people who'll be involved in the conventions—interview them. I end up with two or three hundred pages of notes, and then two weeks before the convention, I sit down and boil it all down to 75 post-card-size cards—one for each state, and special ones for the candidates. By that time I don't really need the cards because the information has been memorized.

HUNTLEY: You can't bone up for it. If you read for six months to prepare for a convention, you'd do all the wrong reading. As you go along during a convention, you make certain notes. But to do it a day, a week, a month in advance is impossible. If I made an elaborate set of notes I wouldn't know where to find them.

CRONKITE: There are periods when you're required to "fill" during stage waits on the convention floor, but I've never felt at a loss at those times. There's more to say, actually, than there is time to say it. There is, of course, the question of relevancy.

BRINKLEY: I remember one commentator, in radio days, who had loaded up on information about the Hayes-Tilden contest, and he simply used it every time there was a dull moment. That's useless. Your commentary has to be pointed. Ad-libbing is not as easy now as it was years ago in radio. There were some anchor men then who could talk for hours, but they said nothing. People are more demanding and sophisticated now, and what you say has to be worth saying.

HUNTLEY: The only thing you really have to worry about is a dull convention, like the one in San Francisco in 1956 which renominated Eisenhower and Nixon. The Democrats in 1964 had somewhat the same problem, but even there you had the civil-rights issue. In a convention like that, no one is quarreling about anything. In most cases, covering a convention is pretty easy. When you get that many politicians in one tent, you're going to have action.

might be talking to delegates, and I wouldn't know who they were.

BRINKLEY: I have an advantage in that I'm based in Washington, and many of the important figures of the convention come from Washington, so I know them. But it's very awkward at times when I'm sitting in that glass box and a face appears at the podium and I don't know who he is.

BRINKLEY: An obvious trap is to believe every rumor you hear. I wouldn't use a rumor on the air unless it seemed reasonable to me, and even then I'd label it as such. I'd rather get beaten on a story than be wrong. NBC is very good about this. No one ever says, "Use this one and not that one." So I use the ones I think should be used and forget the rest. There are a lot of rumors at conventions.

CRONKITE: The thing that concerns me the most is the identification of people. It's possible that something important could be going on and a figure would come onto the convention floor whom I wouldn't recognize; or perhaps a couple of floor managers HUNTLEY: It's all fun, really: the best workout there is for a newsman. And it's made to order for TV. Space shots are tougher because it's all so damned technical and you have to find ways to put it into lay language.

SMITH: I like conventions, and I even forget about the fatigue. Handling a national election is a one-night thing, it's the end of something and there's less apprehension. Conventions are another big milestone along the way in an election year.

BRINKLEY: For me, conventions are easier to handle than election nights, because for elections we are producing the show; conventions are their show and we're covering it. If there are → dull speeches, they're their dull speeches, not ours.

CRONKITE: What makes political conventions tough is the hours. I average six or seven hours a day in the slot during those periods. It takes a weak mind and a strong bladder. I recall being on the job 19 hours one day during the 1952 Democratic convention which produced Stevenson.

BRINKLEY: One thing that many people fail to realize is that, at a convention, television is not only a news medium to inform the Nation about what's going on, but it's also an "intercom" for the convention itself. The candidates stay tuned in to find out what their people and the opposition are doing. Campaign managers try to get their own propaganda planted in the "intercom"; if they can get enough of it on, they might be able to influence the outcome.

SMITH: The convention system itself is neither logical nor tidy, but it sure does work. We've never had a villainous man emerge from it. You do get a Harding now and then. As a method of choosing Presidential nominees, however, it has become part of our folklore and has grown the way a vine grows to a wall.

CRONKITE: The best conventions were those before television started covering them, before delegates became TV conscious. The last was 1952; in 1956, pamphlets were passed out to delegates asking them not to read newspapers at their places, to wear ties and jackets, and not to wander around.

HUNTLEY: The committees are always talking about streamlining the convention process itself, but it might be damned dangerous to do that. Some of the reforms they talk about could result simply in giving power to the chairman to push resolutions through.

BRINKLEY: Attempts to exclude television floor reporters from the convention seem rather silly to me. There are thousands of people on that floor, and to suppose that removing about 15 of them would eliminate congestion just is not sensible. The fat cats would still stand in the aisles, smoke their cigars and scratch their bellies. But it goes far deeper than that. The important point is why we are there. Are we a conduit, or are we there to cover the story? If we are a conduit, then we could indeed eliminate the floor men, and simply put our cameras on the delegates' performances. But that's not our job, and if it were, I wouldn't go. Our job is to dig and to analyze, not make free time available for the delegates to use as they see fit. There's a lot of complaint about this sometimes. Convention officials say, in effect, "We let you into this hall, and you should televise everything we do or say." But nobody writes to the New York Times and raises hell because they didn't print the text of five meaningless speeches.

SMITH: How many really good convention speeches can you remember, anyway? I can only recall three, all of them in 1960: Sen. Eugene McCarthy's nominating speech for Adlai Stevenson; Sen. John Kennedy's acceptance speech; and the one which Orville Freeman ad-libbed—he was nominating Kennedy and the prompting device broke down. He departed from his text altogether and delivered a terrific speech.

HUNTLEY: There's certainly no point in eliminating the television floor men. It wouldn't lower the noise level one bit. The delegates want them there on the floor; it's their big week. They want to be seen back home. Thousands of them have been through contests to get elected. And it's a field day for us. Everybody assembled there has an ax to grind, a piece to speak.

CRONKITE: As far as the actual telling of the story is concerned: We must have convenient camera locations on the floor to cover the podium. But I've said for a long time that it is disruptive to have cameras and reporters right in among the delegates. I'm opposed to streamlining conventions to suit television's needs. We should be there as newsmen covering an event. I regret that they've swept some procedures under the rug for television's benefit. They now make many more decisions in the back rooms to prevent acrimony in public. So I'm afraid television's presence has changed the story a bit.

SMITH: I don't think it would hurt much to leave the TV floor reporters off the floor. We could have camera setups just off the floor and invite any delegates we wanted to interview to come over there. Conventions in general are badly organized. There should be some flashing light system for speakers and an iron rule that each has, let us say, three minutes. Of course, if you tell a politician he has three minutes to make a speech, he gets mad as hell.

BRINKLEY: A typical delegate is a person of some stature in his own community. Many are not full-time politicians, but have local political ambitions. They don't mind at all being seen on camera, mixing it up with all these big names in their party. Political conventions contain a lot of silliness, of course, but so do conventions of bricklayers and chiropractors.

CRONKITE: It's also silly for television anchor men to think about their ratings while they're on the air. I don't, and I doubt anybody else really does.

SMITH: If the ratings are good, that's wonderful; but I don't want to hear about it.

BRINKLEY: There's too much else to think about; anchoring a convention is a very complicated job.

HUNTLEY: I don't know what one would think about ratings if he did think about them. There's not much an anchor man can do to change them, unless maybe he stands up and takes off his pants.

A medically sound treatment for most painful hemorrhoids

First, stop the pain. And the itching. Nupercainal® is a unique combination of lubricants plus the most effective topical pain reliever available without a prescription. It relieves pain and itching fast. Provides much longer lasting relief. Nupercainal also soothes inflamed tissue—in turn helps the natural healing process. Moreover Nupercainal facilitates natural movements.

Next, doctors recommend, use common sense. Stay off spicy, highly seasoned foods. Avoid constipation and what causes it. Such as lack of rest and bad eating habits. Stay regular. Sitz baths aid comfort and natural healing.

Above all, use caution. Nupercainal brings relief in most cases and for most types of hemorrhoids. But if symptoms are severe, persistent, frequently recurrent...if there is rectal bleeding...do see your doctor.

TV Turns to the GOP Convention

The curtain is about to rise on one of the main acts of the 1968 political show on TV: The Republican National Convention. As droves of TV networkers converged on Miami Beach to set the stage, a CBS hassle with technicians over who should operate a digital device for superimposing statistics on the screen was apparently settled by an agreement to submit the dispute to binding arbitration. CBS and NBC, each with about 800 staffers on hand, were readying the usual gavel-to-gavel pickup, starting next Monday following a flurry of convention-eve specials. Competitively, ABC, present in fewer numbers, plans to summarize each day's proceedings with a 90-minute roundup at 9:30 (N.Y. time) following two hours of entertainment-as-usual.

TV may be the hottest politicking medium yet invented by man, but this year's crop of Presidential aspirants often show a distinct preference for using it only on their own terms. And the front runners don't share the public's apparent relish for debates. The result in recent days has been a peppering of the air waves with paid political pitches and set interviews, but a total absence of confrontations of a type designed to thrash out issues and invite comparisons. The networks have given up hope of getting Richard Nixon and Nelson Rockefeller within swinging distance of one another. Rocky was for it, the ex-Veep wasn't. Nixon, for instance, could have shared an hour-long Meet the Press with the New York governor from Miami next Sunday night, but decided to duck it. On the Democratic side, the networks in recent days have tried to coax Hubert Humphrey and Eugene McCarthy into some sort of eyeball-to-eyeball meeting. Humphrey finally joined the senator in agreeing to a joint TV appearance—but there the agreement ended. McCarthy wanted a head-on debate, right away, while the Veep held out for a joint interview, to be postponed until the eve of the Chicago convention in late August. It looked last week as though HHH would have his way as to timing; the chances for an outright debate seemed slim.

Meanwhile, most of the candidates eagerly snapped up bids from the prime Sunday afternoon interview shows. CBS's Face the Nation, for example, quizzed George Wallace on July 21, had Rocky set up for last Sunday, Ronald Reagan for Aug. 4, Humphrey for Aug. 18 and McCarthy Aug. 25. NET, the Public-TV network, landed McCarthy, Rockefeller and Humphrey for hour-long conversations with Paul Niven, but had no word from Wallace or Nixon. Indeed, Nixon was snubbing all the major TV interview shows and confining his TV exposure to filmed programs of his own making, using handpicked "citizen" questioners. Air time was being bought for these shows only in "swing" states such as California, Ohio, Illinois and Michigan.

REMINDER ON VIOLENCE

I would like to remind critics of TV violence that television is only one of many factors influencing human behavior. If a person develops aggressive tendencies during early influences in his family, school, or neighborhood, 50-some-odd other factors, as well as television, could provoke him into violence. If schools, parents, churches, and related institutions would engage in the same self-examination that they have urged upon television, their goal of reducing violence in America might be realized after all.

SOCIAL VIEWS

Edith Efron ("The Program That Explored Real America") [July 20] only compounded NBC's immorality in glorifying the myth of the "beauty" and "nobility" of self-serving "rugged individualism" at a time when working with and for others is so sorely needed. People whose only motives are to "have the career they want and to live the way they want to live"—no matter at whose expense—are the curse of this country.

MAGNIFICENT TELEVISION

Last week I brought home from the library books by De Tocqueville, Marshall McLuhan, Dos Passos, Gordon Parks, and Daniel Boorstin. On commercial TV within the next month, I am sure to see and hear the basic ideas in these books illustrated and discussed, directly or indirectly. It happens all the time. For TV is more than entertainment. It is information and involvement, a magnificent educational medium even when misused and misunderstood.

THIS WEEK'S MOVIES

By Judith

McGUIRE, GO HOME! (NBC), Saturday

TOKYO OLYMPIAD (ABC), Sunday

THE CADDY (ABC), Wednesday

AROUND THE WORLD UNDER THE SEA (CBS), Fri.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

With national convention telecasts taking over the prime time usually allotted to the Tuesday and Thursday-night network movies this week, we're down to only three reruns and, surprising in this season, one film premiere.

The premier is of "Tokyo Olympiad," one of the best documentaries of recent years. Photographed in color, this film of the 1964 Olympic Games was directed by Kon Ichikawa, one of Japan's top young movie makers, whose features—"Fires on the Plain," "The Burmese Harp," "Odd Obsession," "Conflagration," "Alone on the Pacific"—have been shown both at film festivals and in theaters in this country. His documentary of the Olympics is distinguished by his creative approach: Ichikawa went beyond the actual athletic events in an attempt to show, as he put it, "The glory of man as a living creature."

While the over-all record of the 18th Olympiad, involving 5000 athletes from 94 countries, is presented, Ichikawa has concentrated on the individual athlete in climactic moments, on the ritual of preparation for competition and on the drama of the competition itself. A vast project, the film was cut for even its movie-house showings, but what remains is filled with moments of great excitement and sequences of beauty.

For the reruns, go down the quality-scale to about the half-way point and you'll find "McGuire, Go Home!"

a perfectly acceptable suspense drama. It keeps things happening without much concern for the whys and wherefores but action is, after all, action. It's set in Cyprus in 1957 with Dirk Bogarde just fine as a British Intelligence agent, Susan Strasberg dewy-eyed as an American girl in danger. George Chakiris villainous as a Cyprian terrorist and Denholm Elliott almost stealing the movie with a superb bit as Bogarde's buddy.

Keep on going down the scale for the remaining offerings. It you're nostalgic about your erstwhile television-adventure-series heroes or just a glutton for seeing them in silly situations, you can catch Brian Kelly of Flipper, Lloyd Bridges of Sea Hunt, David McCallum of The Man from U.N.C.L.E., and Marshall Thompson of Daktari in "Around the World Under the Sea." They're in a submarine with Shirley Eaton, who had it much better in "Goldfinger" when she was covered with gold rather than television personalities.

And finally, au fond, there's "The Caddy," a 1953 Martin and Lewis movie. In this one Jerry works in a department store and is engaged to Dino's—oops, he was Dean in those days—Dean's sister and Jerry winds up coaching Dean to become a tournament golfer. But if you watch this stuff and do laugh—for heaven's sake, don't feel duty-bound to apologize. It's a matter of taste—admittedly un-acquired in this corner.

We love Brooktrails... and so will you!

The Redwood Forest Area is your last chance to profit with a pre-construction priced view site

Why is Brooktrails a fast sellout? Why have investors purchased over 15 million dollars worth of view sites in less than 9 months? Because it's the most exciting recreational land project of its kind in California. Parcels in the first two areas sold quickly... the third and final area (now available) will not last long. 8:00 2 PRO FOOTBALL—49ers vs. Chargers

SPECIAL COLOR The San Francisco 49ers of the NFL meet the Chargers of the AFL at San Diego in the first pre-season game for each team. This is the first of a three-game telecast schedule of 49er exhibition games by Ch. 2. Gordon Soltan and Bud Foster report the action. (Live)

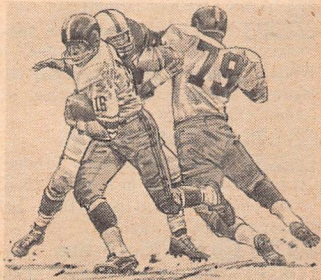

Chargers

Sid Gilman's Chargers (won 8, lost 5, tied 1 last season) hope to move up from their third place finish of a year ago. The offensive punch is supplied by quarterback John Hadl's (21) bombs to All-League flanker Lance Alworth (19), and ends Gary Garrison (27) and Willie Frazier (83). The ground game, hurt early last season by injuries to Paul Lowe (23) and Jim Allison (32), is paced by second year men Dick Post (22) and Brad Hubbert (26), both of whom were outstanding in their rookie seasons.

49ers

New head coach Dick Nolan's hopes to improve last season's 7-7 record rest heavily on the quarterback spot: John Brodie (12) ranked a poor 11th in passing in the NFL last year. George Mira (10) may get the starting nod this year. The receivers are headed by Dick Witcher (88) and Sonny Randle (83). The running game, dismal most of last year, has good potential if John David Crow (44) and Ken Willard (40) can return to their form of a few seasons ago.

WESTERN OPEN

2:00 3 8 12 3:00 2

SPECIAL COLOR Action in the closing rounds of the 65th annual Western Open is telecast from Olympia Fields (Ill.) Country Club.

On Saturday and Sunday, cameras cover action in the third and fourth rounds. Among those expected to compete for shares in the $130,000 purse (first prize: $26,000) is defending champ Jack Nicklaus.

The par-71, 6749-yard course puts a premium on accurate tee shots. The fairways are narrow, well-trapped and lined by trees. The greens, also well-trapped, are fast and mildly contoured. Creeks affect strategy on seven holes; winds (up to 20 mph) are an additional hazard.

If there's a tie, coverage will include the sudden-death play-off. Announcers: John Derr, Bob Toski, Jim McArthur, Ray Scott. (Live)

11 TIME FOR AMERICANS

SPECIAL "Can White Suburbia Think Black?" If white suburbanites can learn what it means to be black, they might comprehend the full implications of being white. New Rochelle, N.Y., is trying to learn. Cameras focus on an interfaith, interracial group in this prosperous suburb a few miles outside of New York City. This is their seventh meeting. This is not a confrontation between have's and have-not's. They are all middle class. What the suburban middle-class Negro wants, he demands. He wants a full share in the decision-making processes shaping many aspects of American society. After the meeting, two observers comment on what they've seen and heard. They are Frank Joyce of the People Against Racism and Dr. Bert Swanson, director of the Institute for Community Studies. New Rochelle was chosen for its similarities to other suburbs. For viewers, the question remains: Is your community in need of verbal confrontations? Host: Frank Reynolds. (60 min.)

Tokyo Olympiad

COLOR Olympic athletes are viewed as performers and individuals in this Japanese documentary on the 1964 Summer Games.

The historical run with the lighted torch begins the film; an impulsive locking of arms ends it. Framed by these dramatic sequences are Olympic athletes giving their all. Artful camera work—including slow motion and extreme close-ups—captures the intensity of the competition. Aerial shots add depth as 80,000 cheer their support.

Gold medalists seen in action include U.S. track stars Billy Mills (10,000-meter run) and Bob Hayes (world-record 100-meter run); swimmers Don Schollander (U.S.) and Australia's Dawn Fraser; and shot-putters Tamara Press (USSR) and Dallas Long (U.S.). Also: less-heralded sports, among them bicycling, walking, volleyball and gymnastics. (90 min.)

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

SPECIAL COLOR The 1968 Republican Convention is telecast live from Convention Hall in Miami Beach.

Today's sessions are scheduled for 7 A.M. and 5 P.M.

Ray Bliss chairman of the Republican National Committee, opens the morning session with a call for the convention to come to order. Florida governor Claude Kirk and Miami Beach mayor Jay Dermer officially welcome the delegates, who then proceed to name Sen. Edward Brooke (Mass.) their temporary chairman. The first session ends with the appointment of permanent committees.

This evening, Ray Bliss will again call the convention to order and then turns the second session (and the gavel) over to Senator Brooke. "The Republican Woman," an address delivered by Mrs. Mary Brooks (assistant National Committee chairman), precedes the highlight of the evening: Washington governor Daniel Evans' keynote speech.

Network coverage (in full color for the first time) will be offered gavel-to-gavel by CBS and NBC. ABC plans 90-minute reports each night, with an option to pre-empt regular programming. Network correspondents include . . .

ABC: Howard K. Smith, William H. Lawrence, Frank Reynolds, Bob Clark and John Scali. William F. Buckley and Gore Vidal offer opposing perspectives (conservative vs. liberal) on the GOP scene.

CBS: Walter Cronkite, Eric Sevareid, Roger Mudd, Mike Wallace and Harry Reasoner. Columnist Art Buchwald provides off-beat views.

NBC: Chet Huntley, David Brinkley, Frank McGee, John Chancellor and Edwin Newman.

JOIN US FOR A WEEK IN MIAMI BEACH.

The Republican convention begins today. And viewers who over the years have insisted on the liveliest, most thorough coverage, will again be following the action on NBC.

Chet Huntley and David Brinkley are NBC's anchormen. Digging through the usual confusions on the convention floor will be broadcasting's most politically acute newsmen: John Chancellor, Frank McGee, Edwin Newman and Sander Vanocur.

And NBC viewers will be closer to the scene than ever, through NBC News' exclusive, new "ultra-portable" color cameras.

Outstanding newsmen...exclusive camera equipment...and that special knack of getting to the heart of every story.

It all adds up on NBC.

YOU NEED TO KNOW.

We could have told you this in July a year ago, but we were busy. We might have mentioned it in all the months that followed. But we didn't.

Now, one full year later, it really needs to be said.

For the past year the CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite has had the largest audience of any regularly scheduled news broadcast in America.

So why are we telling you this now? Simply this.

In the next few days the country will be seeing the most significant Republican Convention of our generation. You need to know what happens in Miami Beach.

And your best news source will be the alert, imaginative and responsible reporting that has made Walter Cronkite and the Worldwatchers of CBS News the most widely followed news team in America.

Look for us in Miami Beach. We'll be looking—for you.

Have you ever tasted artichokes with shrimps and Green Goddess dressing...old-fashioned Spoonbread...Chiles Rellenos...Key Lime Pie?

These are but a few of the delicacies you'll find in American Cooking, the introductory volume in FOODS OF THE WORLD, an exciting new cooking series by TIME-LIFE BOOKS. Two leading authorities give you their valuable guidance and exciting new recipes in this big, beautiful book: James Beard, one of the country's foremost food experts and Michael Field, the famous cooking teacher. Noted photographer Mark Kauffman created its 96 pages of full-color photographs and author Dale Brown its lively text.

Just browsing through the book is a delight. Using it is a joy. For its marvelous recipes for delicious appetizers, soups, entrées, salads, breads, pies and other desserts are so easy to follow, even a beginner will get wonderful results!

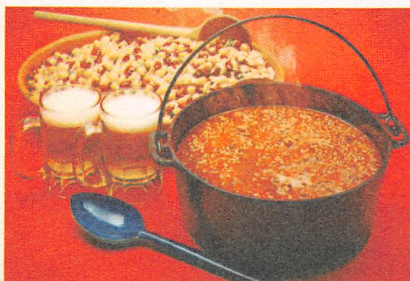

But there's more to this fabulous book than its wealth of recipes. It takes you to "visit" an early American farmhouse as the housewife puts up luscious chunk pickles...to Charleston, New Orleans, Seattle and other fascinating places to discover delicious specialties. It explores the enormous diversity of foods available in the U.S. and suggests new ways to add variety and interest to your meals.

Serve the world's most delicious dishes

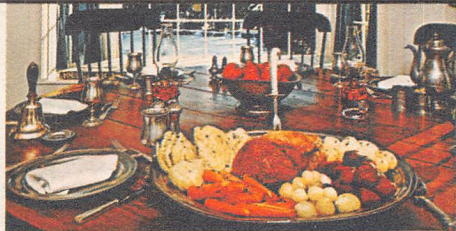

Each volume in FOODS OF THE WORLD takes you to another country or region where experts in that particular cuisine give you authentic recipes for its most delicious dishes and tell you about its fascinating food lore and customs. All recipes are easy to follow, and each one is thoroughly tested under the supervision of Michael Field before inclusion. Every volume is superbly illustrated in the unique, full-color photo-essay style of TIME LIFE BOOKS.

Free 10-day trial

Discover how much you'll enjoy FOODS OF THE WORLD by trying the introductory volume American Cooking, for 10 days free. Then if you wish, you may return it and owe nothing. If you do want to keep it, it is yours for only $4.95 (plus shipping and handling). You'll then be entitled to receive another FOODS OF THE WORLD volume for free examination every two months, and to keep it, if you wish at the same low price. But by accepting this invitation, you make no promise to buy anything. Just mail the postpaid order form or write to: TIME-LIFE BOOKS, Dept. 0713, Time & Life Building, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Chili with Ranch Bean Salad prepared from a Texas recipe has delicious, authentic flavor.

Another celebrated New England culinary creation, baked beans (right), is the best of its kind. The recipe, which has been passed down for generations, is a testament to the skill and creativity of the region's chefs. The beans are cooked in a pot for hours, with a variety of spices and ingredients, including molasses and pork. The result is a dish that is both hearty and delicious, and one that is sure to be a hit with anyone who tries it.

From the great pastures of the New England countryside, the region's chefs have created a variety of dishes that are both delicious and healthy. The region's climate is perfect for growing a variety of fruits and vegetables, and the chefs have made the most of this bounty. The result is a cuisine that is both flavorful and nutritious, and one that is sure to be a hit with anyone who tries it.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

SPECIAL COLOR Live coverage of the 1968 GOP Convention continues from Convention Hall in Miami Beach.

Sen. Edward Brooke (Mass.) calls the convention to order. Slated to speak this evening is House Minority Leader Gerald Ford (Mich.), permanent chairman of the convention, who receives the gavel from Senator Brooke.

The agenda for the session (scheduled to start at 4:30 P.M.) lists reports by the permanent committees on credentials, rules and order of business, permanent organization and resolutions.

The report of the credentials committee is especially significant in that it relates to the balance of delegate representation. Equally important is the platform, which will spell out party positions on issues expected to weigh heavily in the fall campaigns.

CBS and NBC continue to provide gavel-to-gavel coverage. Walter Cronkite is the anchor man for CBS, with Eric Sevareid, Roger Mudd, Harry Reasoner, Mike Wallace, Joseph Benti, Dan Rather and other network newsmen. Columnist Art Buchwald is on hand for color commentary. Chet Huntley and David Brinkley anchor the NBC team, which includes Frank McGee, John Chancellor, Sander Vanocur, Edwin Newman and Ray Scherer.

ABC is covering the convention in 90-minute reports, but may exercise the option to pre-empt regular programming for significant developments. Conservative spokesman William F. Buckley and liberal exponent Gore Vidal join network newsmen Howard K. Smith, William H. Lawrence, Frank Reynolds and other reporters.

CLOSE-UPREPUBLICAN CONVENTION

SPECIAL COLOR The 1968 GOP Presidential candidate is expected to be nominated this evening in Miami Beach, with live TV coverage of the proceedings and colorful demonstrations in Convention Hall.

House Minority Leader Gerald Ford (Mich.) wields the gavel at the session, scheduled to begin at 2 P.M.

The evening gets under way with the election of Republican National Committee members for the next four years.

Following the election, delegations will respond to the roll call for Presidential nominations. (The roll call will be completed before nominating speeches are delivered.)

Rules governing the 1964 convention allowed 15 minutes for a nominating speech, plus four seconding speeches (five minutes each). The rules may be changed this year, and, once adopted, may be subsequently waived. If the sergeant-at-arms can manage it, no outsiders will be permitted to demonstrate for candidates. The chairman will determine time limits for demonstrations by delegates, alternates, governors, lieutenant governors, members of Congress, Republican National Committee members or Republican state chairmen.

When the last parade has filtered back down the aisles, the balloting will begin for the 1968 GOP Presidential candidate. Barring an unexpected number of ballots, the Republican standard bearer will be selected tonight.

Gavel-to-gavel coverage is provided by CBS and NBC. Programming on ABC consists of a 90-minute report, with an option to pre-empt regular programming for significant developments.

6 NET FESTIVAL—Art

"Win, Place and Show." Two half-hour films. 1. "Sao Paulo 9" highlights the works of American artists, who participated in the 1967 Sao Paulo Bienal in Brazil. Featured artists include Andy Warhol, Claes Oldenberg, Jasper Johns, Robert Rauschenberg and Roy Lichtenstein. 2. "Dick Smith A to Z" is a profile of the winner. Focusing on Smith's preferences and pre-occupations, cameras show his unorthodox way of living. (60 min.)

9 NET FESTIVAL—Biography

The last 10 years of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart are traced through his music; scenes of the locales in which he lived and worked; his letters and the letters of those close to him; paintings; and archival material. The film follows the composer's tragic path from the time he left the service of the Archbishop of Salzburg (1781) through periods of temporary affluence, and then to final destitution and isolation. Written and narrated by musicologist H. C. Robbins Landon. (60 min.)

CLOSE-UP

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

SPECIAL COLOR The 1968 Republican Convention is scheduled to conclude this evening, with live coverage from Convention Hall in Miami Beach.

If last night's session produced a GOP Presidential candidate, the fifth and final session will be devoted to Vice Presidential nominations, speeches in support of the nominations, balloting, and acceptance speeches by the party's entrants in the race to the Nation's capital.

House Minority Leader Gerald Ford (Mich.) is expected to call the convention to order at 4:30 P.M. The roll call for Vice Presidential nominations will begin shortly thereafter.

It is customary for the Presidential candidate to indicate his preference for a running mate. If the convention follows the normal course of events, the delegates will approve his selection in short order. If he leaves the choice to the delegates (as Adlai Stevenson did in 1956), tonight's session could run late.

Once the Vice Presidential candidate has been chosen, the delegates will await his appearance and acceptance speech. Then, the grand finale: the acceptance speech by the Presidential candidate.

Network coverage is gavel-to-gavel on CBS and NBC. ABC offers a 90-minute wrap-up, and extended coverage if significant developments occur before or after its special report. Chet Huntley and David Brinkley anchor the NBC team. Columnist Art Buchwald joins CBS anchor man Walter Cronkite and the network's other reporters. ABC has anchor man Howard K. Smith, with William F. Buckley and Gore Vidal providing commentary.

She's Miss Rigg

OF ST. JOHN'S WOOD, NOW

By Robert Musel

The former Mrs. Peel tells why she moved out of 'The Avengers' and abandoned television—for the time being, at least Television has often stretched the long arm of coincidence, but in the St. John's Wood district of London there is a situation that is practically wrenching it loose from the shoulder. Diana Rigg, the tall, cool beauty who, judging from her imploring fan mail, all too briefly adorned The Avengers, has moved into the house where, 140 years ago, the poet Thomas Hood first used the words "prime time" in connection with show business.

Miss Rigg did not know this when she was attracted by the peeling white paint (old houses fascinate her), though she knew Hood had written there, because a memorial incised in a wall records his death in 1845. But she collects information avidly and she might as well know that Hood coined the phrase for the most suitable hour for dropping in to a performance at the Drury Lane Theatre.

Miss Rigg welcomed us to her home, looking as if she had stepped out of an Avengers episode. She wore the same provocative clothes—a beige sweater tucked into brown hipster slacks, low-belted and very tight over the boyish hips, with brown cowboy boots. Her hair hung dark and lustrous on her shoulders and not a sign of makeup. Few actresses would dare as much at the age of 30 in the cruel light of an English spring.

Like many old houses here, the facade of this one gave no clue to the interior—a large, comfortable living room with a huge window where another celebrated tenant, the bohemian artist Augustus John, painted his subjects. Around a bend was an ultra-modern kitchen. Miss Rigg has a reputation as a good cook and even passed the ultimate test for a British hostess by producing drinkable coffee. Then she draped the long thoroughbred body on a couch, and over the cups talked about her decision to leave The Avengers at the height of her success in the series, what has happened since and her plans for the future.

She has an instinctive reaction to even the most searching questions—she answers them candidly. "The studio never liked me to give interviews," she said. "I would always try to speak the truth, you see. You've got to be honest in this business. The public believes in you."

Miss Rigg has mellowed a bit since we last talked, just after her descent from the heights of the Royal Shakespeare Company to The Avengers. Then she was baffled by what she frostily described as "the autograph syndrome" and drove around with sacks of unopened mail in her car. Now she showed interest in one of the many letters I had received about her.

"Emma Peel did a lot for me besides making me well-known over most of the world," she said. "I used to be shy about talking about myself. I was worried about the avalanche of fan mail. The Royal Shakespeare Company doesn't prepare you for that. But I've come to realize and appreciate the interest viewers have in television people. It's surprising—and touching—that nearly a year later so many should write that they regret my departure.

"I simply had to leave the series. The Avengers was fun, but I had no idea when I followed Honor [Blackman] that it would make me a name like this. I began to feel claustrophobic. I began to feel The Avengers was taking over. The degree of success it was getting made it more and more difficult to leave as the weeks went by. If I had stayed, I would have been under pressure by forces outside myself. I knew I had to go, and why wait till I was stale if I could → leave on a high note?"

She said she had no plans for another series, though she would like to do television plays if she could find scripts that really excited her. In the meantime she will continue with her new career in films after she sees the reaction to "The Assassination Bureau," which she has just completed for Paramount, with Telly Savalas and Curt Jurgens.

"I enjoyed making 'The Assassination Bureau' very much. I picked it because it was the best comedy script I had offered me and it was sort of transitional from The Avengers since it's a fantastic story with a zeppelin about to drop a bomb on the crowned heads of Europe at a Peace Conference and so on. Now, obviously, I'd like something more emotionally demanding. But the Avengers character seems to have influenced writers. I've been offered any number of scripts about modern, emancipated, swinging women who don't walk through a door—they kick it open."

American viewers will see Miss Rigg in her famous role of Helena in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which was filmed for TV by the Royal Shakespeare Company.

"For me," she said, "it represented everything a film should be, working with actors and actresses whom I admired and respected. There was a great deal of discomfort, but it didn't matter. Nobody got star treatment. I did my own makeup, for what that's worth, since I'm covered with mud most of the time. But I had to look 16 and that was more difficult."

Miss Rigg's apartment contains a bust of Socrates, a gilded statue (identity unknown) and a sign, "Keep Smiling," presented by the man in her life. She has been in love with this fellow a long time, though she says with the irresistible crooked half-smile of hers that they have no present plans for marriage. "I'm a one-man woman," she said. "I'm faithful to the concept of marriage but not to the necessity of the sacrament itself. I'm happy and fulfilled and that's what counts, isn't it?"

Miss Rigg is a night person (hence the strong morning coffee), fond of late dinner parties, the theater and discotheques. She has no hobbies except reading. She is politically aware and shares the deep European interest in American problems such as Vietnam, race and the Kennedy assassinations.

Unlike many who use race to belabor the U.S., Miss Rigg studies the American Negro situation because she thinks it relates to Britain's own growing color conflict. She regards with contempt the Oscar-winning "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" and its glossy treatment of a mixed romance. "Negroes need security and background," she said, "not treacle."

A broken Irish harp propped in a corner reminded her that she once sang in a stage performance of "Becket" with Christopher Plummer, and this, in turn, recalled her keenest recent disappointment.

"Alan Jay Lerner [who wrote 'My Fair Lady'] came over to ask me to play in the film version of his musical 'Paint Your Wagon.' I sang him an ancient lullaby and he thought that with a few singing lessons I could do it. The part calls for a Southern girl, and Joshua Logan, who is directing, thought I could pick that up in a few lessons too. But my father is very ill and I could not possibly leave.

"Still, it will give me time to think. Three or four months of concentration and some sort of privacy will be good for me. All my life I've been precipitated into everything—modeling, the stage, even The Avengers."

A delightful girl, but I wish she hadn't felt it necessary to help me on with my coat. It hasn't come to that yet, Diana, believe me.

Stop! Put down that watering hose and cool off with delicious parfaits filled with summer fruits. Seedless grapes, green globes of sweetness, combined with refreshing lime. Golden, juicy, ripe peaches, finely chopped, mixed with sugar and whipped cream and then frozen into a light, rich mousse. Garnish with more fresh fruit, a slice of lime or a sprig of fresh mint from the garden. Prepared in the cool of the morning these make great hot afternoon and evening refreshers.

GRAPE LIME CHIFFON PARFAIT

Serves 6 to 8

- | | |
|--------------------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1 package (6 ounces) lime gelatin | 2 egg whites |
| 1 cup boiling water | $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar |
| 2 cups cold water | Small bunches green grapes |
| 2 cups stemmed seedless green grapes | Lime slices |

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Stir in cold water. Chill until mixture thickens slightly. Divide mixture into 2 parts. Fold grapes into first part. Beat egg whites until stiff. Gradually beat in sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time until stiff and glossy. Fold into second portion of gelatin. Spoon alternating layers of clear lime-and-grape mixture and lime-chiffon mixture into parfait glasses. Chill until firm. Top with the bunches of seedless grapes and a thin slice of lime.

FROZEN PEACH MOUSSE PARFAIT

Serves 6 to 8

- | | |
|---|---|
| 6 medium size ripe peaches | 2 cups (1 pint) heavy cream, whipped |
| $\frac{1}{2}$ cup granulated sugar | 4 ripe peaches, peeled, pitted and sliced |
| $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon almond extract | Lemon juice |
| $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon peppermint extract | |

Peel and pit peaches. Mash with a fork or chop finely. Fold in sugar, almond and peppermint extracts. Fold in whipped cream. (For even less work, use 1 quart of the frozen whipped topping thawed and folded into peach mixture instead of whipped cream.) Pour mixture into a freezer container. Freeze until firm. Toss peach slices with lemon juice to prevent darkening. Spoon alternating layers of peach slices and frozen peach mousse into parfait glasses. Garnish with peach slices and a sprig of fresh mint.

'THINK JOHN WAYNE!'

Hip, flip, cocky Bob Crane reveals his secret of playing a hero's role

By Edith Efron

"I watch Hogan's Heroes regularly. This young man, Bob Crane, is a wonderful farceur and there are almost none of them around any more. He's habit-forming." Helen Hayes.

"The ex-POW's in Albuquerque, N.M., have an association. They had a convention and invited me. A lot of POW's are hooked on Hogan's Heroes. They're our biggest rooters—along with New York Jewish delicatessen owners!" Bob Crane.

Millions of Americans are comparably "hooked" on Hogan and his merry band of Allied soldiers who play hob with their Nazi captors every week on CBS. And Hogan, played by actor Bob Crane, has been one of the public's darlings for the past three seasons—to the stupefaction of a lot of people.

The stupefaction mostly exists in the minds of those who haven't seen and don't want to see the series, because they've been understandably traumatized by what they've heard about it—that it's about a Nazi POW camp with "funny Nazis." But the "soft-on-Nazis" trauma turned out to be unnecessary; the show, inspired by "Stalag 17," proved, in production, to be astonishingly innocent. →

It is, in fact, a classical black-and-white comedy, with a bunch of admirable guys thoroughly trouncing a bunch of contemptible guys. The good guys are maniacally unstoppable individualists who have burrowed the POW camp into a giant Swiss cheese, through the holes of which they conduct jubilant and successive "great escapes" in the Allied cause. And the bad guys are Chaplinesque embodiments of authoritarian absurdities—a barking, heiling, goose-stepping batch of uniformed robots, pompous asses, bootlickers, toadies, cowards and dupes. It's a funny, nonoffensive show, and its real theme, as Bob Crane sums it up, is: "Look how clever the Allies are!"

Nevertheless, it's still a dubious enterprise to focus laughingly on Nazis at all, and it comes off successfully because of lively scripts, brilliant comedic acting—and Crane.

Producer Eddie Feldman maintains that Hogan's "believability" is a major key to the innocence of the series, since Hogan subtly sets the moral tone of his followers, and consequently of the total show. Says Crane: "Eddie made it clear to me that I absolutely must not play Hogan as a buffoon. I play him seriously, as a hero, as a leader who can inspire other men to keep fighting, even when behind bars."

Crane's Hogan is a bright, brash young officer with a good dose of mother wit and a twinkle in his eye. He keeps his patriotic band alert and bouncing in the Allied cause by a satisfying combination of idealism, sternness, mischief, Munchausen lies and practical ingeniousness. Physically, he matches his spirit: He's tall, muscular, and moves with a jaunty confidence. In every way, he's the very model of the casually daring young soldier who laughs in the face of obstacles and tweaks the nose of danger. Hogan is pure Americana.

Crane plays the character brilliantly and with such apparent effortlessness that one assumes that he must have a good lashing of authentic Hogan inside him. When one meets him, however, he comes as a distinct shock—a compulsive torrent of affable show-biz talk—facts about his multiple career, his problems, his aspirations, his convictions, all mixed up in an articulate-chaotic, joke-studded stew.

First there's his multiple-career story: He's 40, comes from Waterbury, Conn., and he launched his career at age 11. "I wanted to be the greatest drummer in the world." He became a good one, ended up in the Connecticut Symphony Orchestra. In 1950, he broke into radio, was so successful as a local Connecticut emcee and disc jockey that CBS Radio hired him in Los Angeles. Within six months, he was a hit.

He says, simply, "I do this work well." Hollywood director George Cukor does better by him: "He brightened everybody's life. Really, he was so witty, so original. You honestly became addicted to him."

He then fought his way into acting. "I had the damndest time getting people convinced. They had me typed. I'd beg for jobs, and they'd give me bits, a few lines." Finally, Carl Reinert hired him for a job on The Dick Van Dyke Show. His comedic skill was revealed. It won him the Dave Kelsey role on The Donna Reed Show—and he was launched.

This tale, with a thousand nervous details and asides, is told at break-neck speed, and he comments on his own high-pressure manner as he goes. "I take over. I don't really mean to, but I dominate. A tornado is let loose. It happens when I'm interviewed. On The Merv Griffin Show, Merv looked as if he'd been hit by a flounder. Mike Douglas's producer said I was pushy. I was pushy. I know it. I come on like a Sammy. But I'm not a Sammy. I hate the Sammy Glick type, myself. I try not to be pushy. But I come on too strong. I exhaust people."

He's equally candid about other faults, confessing them with the same high-speed intensity. To wit: "I'm as thin-skinned as Jack Paar. I'm easily hurt. . . . Conflicts scare me. They really do. I run from a fight. . . . I'm not well-educated. I'm afraid of intellectual snobs. I'm afraid of being put down. People bring up cultural subjects, I have to walk away like a dummy. I can't argue with people. . . ."

And as he talks, he proves all this. He complains about an old TV GUME article which criticized him. He stews in a comic German accent about co-star Werner Klemperer (Colonel Klink) who, he says, is "competitive." He relates how comedian Tony Randall scared him: "He talked about opera. Puccini! All I know is Dave Brubeck! I didn't open my mouth for 15 minutes!"

Quipping is his major defense against these panics, and he sees through it. "I joke. It's a comic's defense. What makes Robert run? If they get you in a corner—throw a funny line and run!"

Although he criticizes this aspect of himself, he's attached to it. "I'm hip, flip and cocky," he says. "That's the thing I loved in Jack Lemmon, when I first saw him. The Jack Benny braggadocio that I love. I recognized myself in it. That's me, I thought. A few years ago, Milton Caniff said to me, 'If I were ever to cast Hot Shot Charlie—you're it!'"

But Hot Shot Charlie and Sammy just don't sum him up. Other things are making Robert run, too.

One is brains. Over and over again, his friends and associates like Cukor, and Bob P. Sutton, who hired him as a CBS emcee, comment on his "intelligence," "brilliance" and "wit."

Another is slave labor. Since childhood, he's worked conscientiously and hard to achieve any goals he'd set his heart on. "He's the first one on the set in the morning and the last one to leave. He goes into everything with enthusiasm," says Feldman.

Yet another is guts. Despite his uncertainties, he views his talent as risk capital, and gambles heavily on his own ability. He quit his emcee job, at $75,000 a year, so he could apply himself exclusively to acting. His self-confidence is paying off. He's already won three movie assignments (the most recent being "The Wicked Dreams of PaulaSchultz"), and was hired for ABC's special, "Arsenic and Old Lace," over which he's still breathless with excitement. "If someone had said to me, before it happened, would you like to work with Helen Hayes and Lillian Gish, I'd have said they were joking!"

Finally, he has a good streak of romanticism: "When I was a kid, I fell in love with Spencer Tracy in 'Captains Courageous.' That, to me, was the ideal. A good man, a brave man. What I would want to be. I'm still in love with that." He displays this courage in his moral and political views. He's a tough, grass-roots patriot. "I'm the Ronald Reagan of the Hogan set," he says. "I believe in independence, individualism, courage, patriotism—the traditional American values. People call me a flag waver. That's right—I am a flag waver."

"I originally tried to make the character funny. Eddie convinced me to change. 'You have to be a hero,' he said. The lines dictated heroism. I asked myself: 'What the hell is a hero?' I had a line—a simple line, a kind of understated acceptance of a challenge. I said it in a certain way—almost in a dead, flat, guttural tone. Three guys whirled around, and yelled, 'That's it! John Wayne!'"

And, symbolic to the end, Bob Crane grins. "That's the story. If you want to be a hero—think John Wayne. He'll rescue you every time!"
